Report: Al-Qaeda Threat High

Top intel analysts see heightened risk of strike on U.S. soil

WASHINGTON | Al-Qaeda is using its growing strength in Pakistan and Iraq to plot attacks on U.S. soil, heightening the terror threat facing the United States over the next few years, intelligence agencies concluded in a report unveiled Tuesday.

In the report prepared for President Bush and other top policymakers, analysts laid out a range of dangers — from al-Qaeda to Lebanese Hezbollah to non-Muslim radical groups — that pose a “persistent and evolving threat” to the country over the next three years.

The findings focused most heavily on Osama bin Laden’s al-Qaeda network, which was judged to remain the most serious threat to the U.S. The group’s affiliate in Iraq, which has not yet posed a direct threat to U.S. soil, could do just that, the report concluded. Al-Qaeda in Iraq threatened to attack the United States in a Web statement last September.

In addition, analysts stressed the importance of al-Qaeda’s increasingly comfortable hideout in Pakistan that resulted from a hands-off accord between Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf and tribal leaders along the Afghan border.

National Intelligence Estimates are the most authoritative written judgments of the 16 spy agencies across the breadth of the U.S. government. These documents reflect the consensus long-term thinking of top intelligence analysts. KATHERINE SHRADER (AP)

Lesson to Monkeys: Ask Before Taking

A South Korean tourist has filed a formal complaint against a monkey who, he says, stole his reading glasses during his visit to the Hindu holy city of Varanasi in northern India. Kim Dang Hoon says he opened his hotel room window for fresh air when the monkey made his move. "He headed straight to the table where my glasses were kept and took it away," Kim said in the statement. On Tuesday, police combed Varanasi's alleys, searching for the monkey. "It is difficult to trace the monkey, but I am trying my best to locate the rogue," investigating officer Inspector Govind Singh said from Varanasi, some 185 miles southeast of Lucknow. (AP)

MUSIC

It Sounded Like Pot

When a grand piano played an off-key note, drug police in Cartagena, Columbia, opened it up and found about 560 pounds of cocaine stuffed inside. The piano was part of a shipment of household items originating in the capital of Bogota and destined for Panama, police said in a statement Monday. Authorities were investigating but had made no arrests. The drugs' value was estimated at $5 million. Agents in Cartagena noticed the piano was suspiciously heavy and decided to tap some keys, only to find the sound quality seemed strange, according to the statement. The cocaine was discovered packed into various recesses of the instrument. (AP)

PAGANS VS. 'THE SIMPSONS'

Homer, Sexual

"The Simpsons" have gone many places in their 18 years: Japan, Brazil, England and even Rhode Island in an unfortunate episode. Now Homer is back in Britain, in the form of a 180-foot painting — complete with a doughnut — next to the Cerne Abbas giant chalk sketching in Dorset. Homer's image is made out of water-based biodegradable paint that will wash away as soon as it rains. That can't come soon enough for the area's pagans, who are certainly having a cow over the promotion for "The Simpsons Movie." They've pledged to perform "rain magic" to quickly wash away Homer, whose presence they feel is defiling the giant, their famous symbol of fertility. (EXPRESS)

Prison Break

Virginia Zoo officials on Monday began trimming the landscaping around a new red panda exhibit after the animal escaped for the second time in less than a month. Yin, a 1-year-old who resembles a raccoon with red, white and black fur, was discovered missing from her exhibit Saturday. On June 21, Yin made visitors wait two hours for her debut only to escape into a nearby tree. "She's a character," said Alison Till, the zoo's director of development. (AP)

Study: Fruit and Veggie Diet Won't Stop Cancer's Return

Hopes that a diet low in fat and chock-full of fruits and vegetables could prevent the return of breast cancer were dashed Tuesday by a large, seven-year experiment in more than 3,000 women. The government study found no benefit from a mega-veggies-and-fruit diet over the U.S. recommended servings of five fruits and vegetables a day — more than most Americans eat. (AP)

Senate Strains Escalating Over Iraq

Democrats force rare all-night session on withdrawal legislation

WASHINGTON | Senate Democrats refused to flinch Tuesday as the chamber moved toward a rare, all-night session of debate on legislation to bring troops home this fall.

They called for sleeping cots to be rolled into a room off the Senate floor and told members to prepare for repeated votes throughout the evening. Senators even left open the possibility of dispatching the sergeant at arms to summon colleagues from their homes to the floor if lawmakers ignored the debate.

The threat was reminiscent of a 1988 debate on campaign finance reform in which Capitol police carried Oregon Republican Sen. Robert Packwood into the Senate feetfirst shortly after 1 a.m.

The goal of the planned marathon debate was to test the patience of Republicans, who have threatened to filibuster the bill.

After months of a threatened filibuster, Senate Majority Whip Richard Durbin, D-Ill., said it was "time for a taste of the real thing."

Republicans dismissed the maneuver as political theater and said the Senate should forgo the debate and vote immediately on whether to advance the measure. Whether the vote comes Tuesday or Wednesday, the proposal is expected to gain a majority of senators but not reach the 60-vote threshold.

The legislation, proposed by Sens. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and Jack Reed, D-R.I., would order troops to start leaving in 120 days and complete the pullout by April 30, 2008. ANNE FLAHERTY (AP)

Officers on Perilous Hunt for Sniper

Suspect with military training disappears in rugged Wyo. terrain

CHEYENNE, WYO. | David Munis was trained by the Army in how to live off the land, how to move stealthily in the wilderness, how to throw pursuers off his trail and how to squeeze off a shot from a concealed position and hit a target the size of a postage stamp at 100 yards away.

Law enforcement officers in Wyoming continue their search for David Munis.

Those skills could make it extremely difficult — and dangerous — for the law officers trying to hunt him down.

Munis, a military sniper, is wanted on first-degree murder charges in the death of his estranged wife, who was cut down with a bullet that came crashing through a plate-glass door at a Cheyenne restaurant and lounge and struck her in the head as she sang the Toby Keith song "I Love This Bar."

"Apprehending a man with that kind of sniper skill and the weaponry he has available to him is an extremely dangerous type of proposition," said Cheyenne police spokesman Capt. Jeff Schulz.

On Monday night, Munis' truck was found in rugged mountains north of Laramie, about 50 miles west of Cheyenne. Police said they believe that Munis, a devoted hunter, fled into terrain where his training could give him the advantage. He was believed to have at least one high-powered rifle with him.

Steroids Found in Wrestler

Medical examiner says drug didn't play role in murder-suicide

DECATUR, GA. | Pro wrestler Chris Benoit had steroids and other drugs in his system when he killed his wife and young son last month and hanged himself in the family's home, investigators said Tuesday.

Benoit's body contained 10 times the normal level of testosterone, which appeared to have been injected shortly before he died, as well as the anti-anxiety drug Xanax and the painkiller hydrocodone, authorities said.

Benoit

The state's top medical examiner, Dr. Kris Sperry, said there was no evidence of any other anabolic steroids in the wrestler's body, and nothing to show that steroids played a role in the death of Nancy and Daniel Benoit.

"An elevation of that ratio does not translate into something abnormal in a person's thought process or behavior," he said.

Sperry said the boy appeared to have been sedated when he was asphyxiated, and Benoit's wife had a "therapeutic" level of sedatives in her body.

Benoit killed his wife and 7-year-old son, placed Bibles next to their bodies and then hanged himself on the cable of a weight machine.

Benoit's wife, Nancy, tested positive for Xanax, hydrocodone and the painkiller hydromorphone. Daniel Benoit had Xanax in his system, authorities said.

Authorities have charged Benoit's physician, Dr. Phil Astin, with improperly prescribing painkillers and other drugs to two patients other than Benoit. He has pleaded not guilty. GREG BLUESTEIN (AP)

Sept. 11 Workers Sue Insurance Fund

NEW YORK | Ailing Ground Zero workers in New York went to court Tuesday to demand that the company overseeing a $1 billion Sept. 11 insurance fund uses it to pay for their health care.

Attorneys for the workers argue that federal officials meant for the money in the WTC Captive Insurance Co. to be used as compensation for sick workers.

New York City officials have long said that the money must first be used to litigate claims before it goes to workers. New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, who was named in the suit, said Tuesday that attorneys are wrong about the company's structure.

"The truth of the matter is, Congress didn't set up a victims' compensation fund," the mayor said. (AP)

Federal Judge Will Not Acquit Padilla in Trial

MIAMI | A federal judge refused Tuesday to acquit Jose Padilla and two co-defendants on terrorism support charges, clearing the way for defense lawyers to begin presenting their case this week.

U.S. District Judge Marcia Cooke, ruling after a daylong hearing, said the evidence and testimony offered by the prosecution over the past nine weeks was enough proof to let a jury decide whether the men are guilty.

"That is something the jurors will have to find," Cooke said.

Padilla, a U.S. citizen also held for 3½ years without charge as an enemy combatant, is accused in the Miami case of completing a form to attend an al-Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan. (AP)

VA Head Resigns Amid Care Probe

Nicholson ends tenure with department after budget, security woes

WASHINGTON | Veterans Affairs Secretary Jim Nicholson abruptly resigned Tuesday after months of the Bush administration struggling to defend charges of shoddy health care for veterans injured in the Iraq war.

Nicholson, a former Republican National Committee chairman and a Vietnam War veteran, was picked by President Bush to head the Veterans Affairs Department in 2005. Planning to return to the private sector, he said his resignation is to take effect no later than Oct. 1.

Nicholson is the latest in a line of senior officials heading for the exits in the final 1½ years of the Bush administration.

His resignation comes amid intense political and public scrutiny of the Pentagon and VA following reports of shoddy outpatient care of injured troops and veterans.

It also ends a beleaguered two-year tenure in which Nicholson repeatedly fought off calls for his resignation over the VA's unexpected $1.3 billion shortfall in 2005 that put health care at risk; last summer's theft of 26.5 million veterans' personal data in what was the government's largest security breach; and, more recently, the award of $3.8 million in bonuses to senior officials who were responsible for the agency's budget problems.

"It has been an honor and privilege to lead the VA during this historic time for our men and women who have worn the uniform," Nicholson said in a statement. (AP)

Massacre Reported in Shiite Village

U.S. troops launch offensive after 29 die in restive Diyala area

BAGHDAD | U.S. troops stormed Tuesday into an insurgent-controlled area of a turbulent province where police reported that gunmen — some wearing military clothing — had massacred 29 Shiite villagers the night before.

The fighting escalated north of Baghdad as America's top general, Peter Pace, said parts of Iraq are undergoing a "sea change" in security, notably Ramadi, where Sunni tribes have turned against al-Qaeda in Iraq. Attacks against U.S. forces in that city have dropped dramatically.

But success in some areas is tempered by violence elsewhere and continued doubts over the ability of Iraq's political leaders to set aside their differences and achieve a lasting peace.

American soldiers backed by tanks and helicopters rolled into the eastern part of Baqouba, the capital of Diyala province. Sunni extremists were believed to be moving out of Baqouba in anticipation of a U.S. attack, seeking shelter with friendly tribes to the north and east.

Elsewhere in Diyala, police Col. Ragheb Radhi al-Omairi said 29 members of a Shiite tribe were massacred overnight when dozens of suspected Sunni gunmen raided their village near Muqdadiah, about 20 miles from Baqouba.

On the political front Tuesday, the leader of a 30-member parliamentary bloc loyal to anti-U.S.

cleric Muqtada al-Sadr announced an end to a five-week boycott of the assembly, which had stalled work on major legislation.

Nasser al-Rubaie said the decision was made after the government agreed to rebuild a Shiite mosque in Samarra which was destroyed in two bombings and to secure the highway from Baghdad to the shrine. ROBERT H. REID (AP)

Life Terms In Libyan HIV Case

6 foreign medics have death sentences tossed in latest appeal

TRIPOLI, LIBYA | The death sentences for five Bulgarian nurses and a Palestinian doctor accused of infecting hundreds of Libyan children with HIV have been commuted to life in prison, Libya's foreign minister said Tuesday.

The ruling came after the families of the children each received $1 million and agreed to drop their demand for the execution of the six, who deny having infected more than 400 children and say their confessions were extracted under torture.

Foreign Minister Abdel-Rahman Shalqam said Tripoli was willing to consider the medics' deportation to Bulgaria.

Bulgaria's chief prosecutor, Kamen Mihov, said requests would be made Wednesday to have the medics leave Libya shortly. They have been jailed since 1999.

But the medics' main Libyan defense lawyer, Osman al-Bizant, told the Al-Jazeera television network that their deportation would depend on "whether there is the possibility of carrying out the punishment there [in Bulgaria]." (AP)

Jet Skids Into Gas Station in Brazil

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL | A plane with as many as 170 people aboard crashed and burst into flames in Sao Paulo on Tuesday after skidding off a runway that has been criticized as being too short, the nation's airport authority said.

There were no immediate reports of deaths by authorities, but a witness said he saw one charred body as flames shot into the sky after the crash.

The Tam airline's Airbus-320 skidded off the runway at Congonhas airport, then crossed a busy road during rush hour before slamming into a gas station, said Jose Leonardi Mota, a spokesman with airport authority Infraero. Tam Linhas Aereas flight 3054 was en route to Sao Paulo from the southern Brazilian city of Porto Alegre, Mota said.

The accident happened during heavy rains, and critics have warned for years that such an accident was possible at the airport because its runway is too short for large planes landing in wet conditions. (AP)

Bolivia Aiming to Sew New Threads

Andean nation moves to restrict imports of used clothes from U.S.

EL ALTO, BOLIVIA | Those stained T-shirts and stretched-neck sweaters you clean out of your closet may one day wind up heaped waist-high on a plastic tarp in this chilly Andean city's vast outdoor market.

Clothes dropped off at charities in the U.S. and Europe are often sold and delivered to the developing world, where each year $1.2 billion in used clothing sent from wealthy nations is rummaged through by poor shoppers in search of a deal.

It's a business that President Evo Morales considers shameful. In April, Bolivia became the 32nd nation to ban or restrict used clothing imports in an attempt to protect native clothing industries.

Applauded and jeered for the striped Bolivian sweater he wore to meet presidents and kings worldwide after his 2005 election, Morales understands well that clothes make the man.

But buying used clothing is a hard habit to break. On market days, poor and middle-class Bolivians alike search the heaps of offseason department store lines and Christmas sweaters.

Bolivia has an estimated 15,000 used clothing sellers, organized into unions. And while 6,000 of these "ropavejeros" have signed up for job training and loans, others have marched against the ban.

Many countries face similar struggles, with used clothes glutting the market like never before.

With a monthly paycheck under $200 and five teenage kids to clothe, policeman Jose Luis Hernandez said he digs through the used clothing out of necessity, not choice.

"We want so much to dress our children in new clothes, clothes from the store. But we can't. We have to face reality," Hernandez said. DAN KEANE (AP)

China Tells Gamers: Get Out and Exercise

New rules will limit amount of time teens spend in virtual play

HONG KONG | The Chinese government has launched a campaign to limit the number of hours teenagers spend online playing games.

Under new rules that took effect Monday, Chinese Internet gaming companies must install a program that requires users to enter their ID card numbers. After three hours, players under 18 are prompted to stop and "do suitable physical exercise."

If they continue, the software slashes by half any points earned in the game. All points are wiped out if players stay on more than five hours.

The program is part of a government campaign to combat gaming addiction, "clean up the Internet environment" and "promote civilized Internet use," according to China's General Administration of Press and Publication.

After playing games for three hours, teens will be told to stop and exercise.

About 10 percent of China's more than 30 million Internet gamers were underage as of the end of 2006, according to the Chinese newspaper National Business Daily.

The government guidelines don't flat-out denounce the popular pastime, saying "measured gaming is good for the brain, but gaming addiction hurts the body."

Gaming companies The9 — which runs the popular "World of Warcraft" online game in China — and Tencent both said Tuesday they have started using the screening software. MIN LEE (AP)

BIG GIVE: Scottish property entrepreneur Sir Tom Hunter pledged to give $2 billion to charity, he said in an interview Tuesday. This would be the largest-ever contribution to charity by an individual in Britain. SEASICK: Thai police reported they arrested a man planning to sell more than a ton of illegal puffer fish — which contain a potent toxin that can kill unsuspecting diners — at a wholesale market. The sale of the fish has been banned in Thailand since 2002, after six Thais who ate it died.

Breaking N. Korea Nuclear Déjà Vu

Envoys working to avert past history of stalled agreements

BEIJING | North Korea shut down its atomic reactor and is no longer making plutonium for nuclear bombs, prompting aid shipments to flow to the impoverished regime that struggles with shortages of electricity and food.

That happened Saturday as Pyongyang took its first step toward disarmament since the latest nuclear standoff began in late 2002. It's also exactly what happened in 1994 after the North struck a disarmament deal with the U.S.

As arms negotiators gather anew this week in Beijing, Washington is wrestling with the challenge of preventing history from repeating itself — and having another disarmament agreement end in failure.

Envoys arrived Tuesday for talks about the next steps for North Korea's disarmament that Washington says it hopes will lead to disabling the nuclear facilities by the end of the year, meaning they could not be easily reactivated.

After initial meetings with the North, U.S. nuclear envoy Christopher Hill expressed optimism that a time frame for future steps could be agreed upon.

The North also shut down the reactor in 1994 after signing a deal with Washington, getting oil shipments in return and the promise of two nuclear reactors for generating electricity. But construction dragged on for years as the deal lacked support from Congress.

Amid the stalling, the U.S.

Hill

believes the North secretly embarked on an uranium enrichment program. Instead of an agreement only with the North, the U.S. has brought in a handful of regional partners: China, Japan, Russia and South Korea.

In principle, Beijing and Seoul are able to apply more leverage on the North as its main trade partners and sources of aid.

"I don't think it's going to be so easy for the North Koreans to walk away from this agreement," Hill said in an interview this week. "A lot of countries are stakeholders to this agreement." BURT HERMAN (AP)

Afghan Poppy Crop Sets Record

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | Afghanistan's heroin-producing poppy crop set another record this season, despite intensified eradication efforts, the U.S. ambassador said Tuesday.

Ambassador William Wood said preliminary data show that Afghan farmers harvested 457,135 acres of opium poppies this year, compared to 407,715 acres last year. The growing industry fuels the Taliban, crime and government corruption.

Government-led eradication efforts destroyed about 49,420 acres of poppies this year, a "disappointing" outcome, Wood told reporters in Kabul. (AP)

Club Plan Upsets Dupont

Land underneath circle eyed as site for displaced strip joints

WASHINGTON | Some residents are objecting to an idea that would literally drive some of Washington's strip clubs underground by placing them beneath a landmark traffic circle.

District of Columbia Council member Jim Graham said last week that he is considering a suggestion to allow at least two clubs formerly located on the site of the Nationals' new ballpark to open in an abandoned trolley-car complex under Dupont Circle.

"I'm not sure this is the best space for any club setting," neighborhood activist Mike Silverstein said Monday. "The idea of having hundreds of people in an underground setting, where liquor is served and [with] very limited access in and out, brings up safety issues."

Graham initially proposed legislation that would have allowed clubs displaced by the baseball stadium to transfer their liquor licenses and move to properties in the blighted New York Avenue corridor, prompting fears of an unwanted red-light district.

The D.C. Council later passed a series of limitations on where the clubs could relocate to keep them from clustering together. Graham said the idea of placing clubs under Dupont Circle would not move forward without community input.

The old trolley complex, known as Dupont Down Under, has a history of failed business ventures. (AP)

Barry to Be Immortalized in Wax

WASHINGTON | Former D.C. Mayor Marion Barry will be immortalized in wax when the latest Madame Tussauds wax museum opens this year in Washington.

Barry, now a District of Columbia Council member, was selected as the last of the 50 figures to be displayed at the museum. He beat out nine other finalists chosen by museum officials, including Nancy Reagan, Oprah Winfrey and Cal Ripken.

The museum's general manager, Janine DiGioacchino, said staffers visited places like Union Station and the National Mall to ask people who they would like to see displayed. "The response was an overwhelming landslide for Council member Marion Barry," DiGioacchino said.

Madame Tussauds is set to open in October and will be located downtown in the former Woodward & Lothrop department store. (AP)

WSJ Buyout Moves Closer

Bancroft family must still OK $5B bid from Murdoch's News Corp.

NEW YORK | With Rupert Murdoch reportedly sealing a tentative agreement to acquire the Wall Street Journal, the question now turns to the biggest obstacle remaining for a deal: winning over the mercurial Bancroft family, which controls Dow Jones & Co.'s shareholder vote.

The family initially rebuffed Murdoch's offer in early May but later agreed to consider it. They insisted on, and received, a commitment to create an oversight board that must approve the hiring or firing of top editors at the newspaper.

Negotiators from Dow Jones and News Corp., the global media conglomerate controlled by Murdoch, reached an initial agreement to sell Dow Jones for $5 billion, Murdoch's original offering price, the Journal reported Tuesday.

Dow Jones' board was set to consider the proposal Tuesday evening. Assuming the deal receives board approval, the proposal would then be presented to Bancroft family members on Thursday, who would take several days to consider it, the paper reported.

Dow Jones, News Corp. and a representative for the Bancroft family all declined to comment.

The Bancrofts have been divided about the fate of the company from the early stages of Murdoch's overture, which began in late March. Even after reaching a pact on editorial independence, there were other signs that the family remained split.

Two Bancroft family members who are also Dow Jones directors have been seeking to thwart Murdoch's efforts, the Journal reported, but neither appeared close to succeeding.

A union representing Journal reporters and other Dow Jones employees has objected to Murdoch's bid, saying he would downgrade news coverage and interfere with newsroom independence for his own business interests. (AP)

Dow Briefly Crosses 14,000 Mark

NEW YORK | The Dow Jones industrial average swept past 14,000 for the first time Tuesday after a mostly tame inflation reading gave investors reason to extend an extraordinary — but perhaps questionable — Wall Street rally.

The stock market's best-known indicator crossed 14,000 in the first half-hour of trading, though it didn't close above that level. It did, however, manage its fourth record close in as many sessions. The Dow rose as high as 14,021.95, having taken just 57 trading days to make the trip from 13,000. Broader market indicators closed mixed.

Stocks have risen fairly steadily since the spring amid a continuum of buyout news and evidence that despite higher fuel prices and the ongoing problems in the housing market and mortgage lending industry, consumers are spending and companies are still finding room for growth. With the Federal Reserve ever vigilant about inflation, any news that prices are rising at a moderate pace has added to the market's momentum.

The jump Tuesday came as Wall Street sorted through a somewhat mixed inflation reading and profit reports from blue-chip names including Coca-Cola Co. (AP)

Dogfighting Indictment For Vick

Federal grand jury brings charges against Falcons QB, 3 others

FOOTBALL | Atlanta Falcons quarterback Michael Vick was indicted by a federal grand jury on Tuesday on charges related to illegal dogfighting.

Vick and three others were charged with violating federal laws against competitive dogfighting, procuring and training pit bulls for fighting and conducting the enterprise across state lines.

The indictment alleges that Vick and his co-defendants began sponsoring dogfighting in early 2001, Vick's rookie year with the Falcons.

It accuses Vick, Purnell A. Peace, Quanis L. Phillips and Tony Taylor of "knowingly sponsoring and exhibiting an animal fighting venture," of conducting a business enterprise involving gambling, as well as buying, transporting and receiving dogs for the purposes of an animal fighting venture.

Telephone messages left at the offices and home of Vick's attorney, Larry Woodward, were not immediately returned. (AP)

With DeShawn, Wizards Stay Whole

Team keeps the entire starting 5 intact by signing Stevenson

WIZARDS | Eddie Jordan could hardly stop smiling on Tuesday.

As the Washington Wizards' coach sat next to guard DeShawn Stevenson at a news conference formally announcing Stevenson's new contract, he was elated to finally have a full starting lineup with experience in his system.

"It's a great relief," Jordan said. "We're a step ahead of the game, as opposed to the last two or three years."

Stevenson, 26, re-signed with the Wizards on Monday, reaching a deal reportedly worth $15 million over four years. His return means that, for the first time since Jordan took over before the 2003-04 season, Washington's group of projected starters is the same as last year's.

"I really wanted to stay here because I felt like I gelled with the starting five," Stevenson said. "I think the coaching staff and everything, it's easy to play with them. ... I think all around, it was a no-brainer."

DeShawn Stevenson, right, is now the long-term solution at shooting guard for the Wizards. Stevenson averaged 11.2 points, 2.6 rebounds and 2.7 assists last year.

The Wizards' starting five have constantly changed since the beginning of the decade. Arrivals and departures of key players such as Michael Jordan, Jerry Stackhouse, Gilbert Arenas, Larry Hughes and Caron Butler have led to offseason uncertainty and in-season growing pains. Establishing some continuity this offseason was a top priority for president of basketball operations

"My size allows me to stay in a lower-volume boat. My strength-to-boat-volume ratio is higher than most."

At 5-foot-2, Caroline Queen, 15, may be young and small, but she's a big part of the U.S. Senior National Kayak Team. | Today, Sports

Ernie Grunfeld, and re-signing Stevenson was the biggest hurdle.

"We wanted to keep this group together," Grunfeld said. "We felt like last year, especially toward the middle of the year when we had the best record in the [Eastern Conference], we were really rolling before injuries set in. He was a big part of that." (AP)

Mystics' Plan Focuses on Playoffs

Despite a horrid start, Washington is 3 games behind the No. 3 seed

MYSTICS | When the Mystics returned to Washington on Monday, back from a few days of rest during the all-star break, interim coach Tree Rollins called a team meeting in which the first order of business was to construct a virtual road map for the second half of the season.

On a large board, Rollins wrote the names of the teams that the Mystics will likely have to chase down for a playoff spot — Chicago, Connecticut, New York — and each of their remaining schedules. Then he listed the Mystics' slate of games: seven at home, eight on the road.

From there, Washington formulated a list of "must-win" games, the first of which comes Wednesday morning in a matchup with the Houston Comets at Verizon Center.

Nakia Sanford says the Mystics' goal is to do better than just make the playoffs.

"We're trying to do better than just the fourth-place spot," forward-center Nakia Sanford said. "It's not impossible. We know which games we definitely have to win."

Indeed, even after a horrendous 0-8 start to the season and a spate of inconsistency both offensively and defensively, Washington (7-12) remains a viable player in the race for the postseason.

Outside of leaders Indiana and Connecticut, only New York has a winning record (10-9). Last-place Washington, five games under .500, is just three games behind New York for the third seed in the Eastern Conference and 1 1/2 games behind Connecticut for the fourth spot.

"I think we're all focused and encouraged because we know we're not that far behind from being a team in the playoffs," forward Monique Currie said.

Capitals Re-Sign Both Eminger And Sutherby

CAPITALS | Defenseman Steve Eminger and center Brian Sutherby re-signed Tuesday with the Washington Capitals, who also added free agent center Jason Morgan.

Eminger had one goal and 16 assists last season, his fourth with the Capitals. He has six goals and 35 assists in 192 career NHL games since being the 12th overall pick in the 2002 draft.

Sutherby finished last season with seven goals and 10 assists and was fourth on the Capitals with 78 penalty minutes. He missed the last nine games with a hand injury.

The 30-year-old Morgan played four games with the Wild last year and has two goals and five assists in 44 career games. (AP)

ROCKETS IN FLIGHT, OLYMPIC DELIGHT: Weather forecasters in Beijing are planning to fire rockets to disperse rain clouds in hope of securing more sunshine for the Olympics. Amid the Carnage, a Golf Tourney

With no one shooting under par, are Majors becoming too hard?

GOLF | No one seems to be having much fun in the majors except the guys who leave with the trophy.

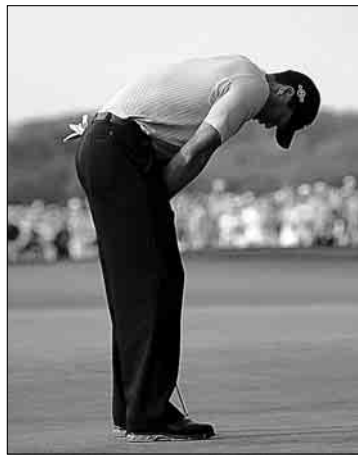

The cheers were muted at Augusta National, where frigid temperatures and bone-dry conditions made it the highest-scoring Masters in more than 50 years. Birdies were rare until Sunday, and even a 69 by Zach Johnson wasn't enough to allow him to break par over 72 holes. Jack Burke Jr. in 1956 was the last player to win a green jacket with black numbers next to his name.

Oakmont was even worse.

Already regarded as the toughest championship course in America, it became a sheer brute with gnarly rough framing narrow fairways that led to slick, scary greens at the U.S. Open. Tiger Woods was the runner-up, despite making one birdie over the final 32 holes. Phil Mickelson blamed his wrist injury on chipping out of the rough during a marathon practice round. Angel Cabrera won at 5 over par.

Next up is Carnoustie, which is no cupcake.

Forgotten amid the debacle of Jean Van de Velde's collapse in 1999 was the winning score of 290, the highest for a British Open since 1947.

"It's not a good year for the stroke average," Nick Faldo said.

Indeed, this is shaping up as the toughest year in the majors since the Masters was created in 1934.

The odds are Carnoustie won't be as nasty as it was eight years ago, when an overzealous superintendent shrunk the fairways and grew the grass to absurd heights, and the number of complaints was almost higher than the winning score.

"If the average player had to play out there, he'd probably quit the game," David Duval said at the time. "A lot of pros, too."

Few would argue that majors aren't supposed to be the hardest. They should test every aspect of the game. They should identify who played the best golf.

But with two champions who couldn't break par, it raises the question of whether the majors are getting out of hand.

"We are not seeking carnage," Royal & Ancient chief executive Peter Dawson said. "We're seeking an arena where the players can display their skills to the best effect." DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

SUMO WRESTLING | AN UPSET OF GINORMOUS PROPORTIONS

Tour Favorite Falls Further Behind

Rookie takes final Alps stage as Rasmussen remains in yellow

CYCLING | A favorite to win the Tour de France, Alexandre Vinokourov's title hopes are fading fast.

The injured cyclist fell more than eight minutes behind Michael Rasmussen in Tuesday's ninth stage, the last of three stages in the Alps.

Juan Mauricio Soler, a 24-year-old Colombian competing in his first Tour for the newcomer Barloworld team, attacked in the last of three major ascents and held off a pack of chasers to win the stage.

"I'm really happy. ... Winning a stage is a dream," Soler said.

Rasmussen leads a thinning pack of hopefuls after the Alps proved too much for some.

His ambitions are growing to hold on to the leader's yellow jersey, which he took in the second Alpine stage Sunday. His main rivals did little during Tuesday's climbs. (AP)

ON HIS WHEEL

Michael Rasmussen continues to race well, but he is just minutes ahead of the contenders:

- Carlos Sastre, 3:39

ROAD TEST | I suppose others have a more highly refined sense of aesthetics, but I just can't get behind the debate over the old versus new Scion xB, the funky five-seat space wagon sold by Toyota's Gen Y-oriented brand. Aren't they both ugly?

So, then, what's to celebrate about the second-generation xB?

Just about everything, starting with the fact that the xB feels a hundred times more substantial than before. The booming hollow-ness is gone, as are the unpleasant droning notes that seeped into the cabin at speed.

To be sure, the new xB is not as much a cult object as before. It's bigger, heavier, unquestionably ROME-ING THE COUNTRY: Pecs, Hungary, offers visitors a chance to see a former mosque and then take a wine tour in the same day. No wonder the Romans liked it.

BELA SZANDELSZKY/AP

A Thirst for Hungary

Pecs offers a glimpse of the past — and a taste of the present

CITY OF GODS | A church without a steeple; a near-Mediterranean climate far from the Mediterranean Sea; winemaking traditions in the region dating from the Roman Empire. The southern Hungarian city of Pecs, in brief.

In 2010 — along with Essen, Germany, and Istanbul, Turkey — Pecs will be a European Capital of Culture. Located 125 miles south of Budapest, it's a comfortable three-hour train ride from Hungary's capital.

Pecs, or Sopiane as it was called by the Romans, has more than 2,000 years of its history on display. Besides its Hungarian traditions, the city has remnants of the Roman times, dating back to 350 to 400 A.D., and the even more visible Muslim structures left behind by the Turks, who occupied the city for more than 140 years from 1543.

The Inner City Parish Church may not have an impressive name, but it is one of the most beautiful places of worship you'll ever see.

Standing atop Szechenyi Square in the city center, the church has undergone numerous transformations since the Middle Ages and you'd be forgiven for not recognizing it — because it looks like a mosque.

Actually, the stones of the Gothic Church of St. Bartholomew were used by the Turks to build the mosque of Pasha Gazi Kassim. After the Turks were expelled from Pecs in 1686, the mosque was taken over by the Jesuits, restoring it to its Christian use.

IF YOU GO ...

→ Getting There: Seven InterCity trains run daily from Budapest's Keleti station, a three-hour ride. It's also about three hours by car.

→ Lodging: A "pension" room for two in the city center starts at $40 while a double room at a three-star hotel starts at about $100.

→ Villany Wine Region: A 30-minute drive from Pecs. (Daily train service from Pecs is offered but not recommended.)

From Roman times, the most notable remains are the early Christian burial chambers, the earliest dating to the fourth century.

While archaeologists have been exploring them for centuries, the addition of the cemetery to the UNESCO's list of World Heritage sites in 2000 gave the dig a fresh boost.

The remains of the Cella Septichora — an early Christian chapel from the fourth century with seven apses (vaulted recesses) first explored in the early 1900s — are now included in a new visitors' center that opened to the public just a few months ago.

Thanks to a labyrinthine set of hallways and walkways, the burial chambers can be seen from practically every angle.

About 22 miles southeast of Pecs are the Villany Hills, whose southern slopes and valley are shielded from the cold north winds and offer a home to one of Hungary's best-known wine regions.

Villany is also a town that is the unofficial capital of the local vineyards, which spread along a series of small villages where it seems every family has its own little winery.

The Villany-Siklos Wine Route, which winds through 11 localities, can be a methodic way to explore the wine cellars, though how methodic you will still be after the second or third wine-tasting is hard to guess. For a more intimate experience with no loss in quality, you can try the wine cellars of Istvan Kovacs.

The Kovacs-Gressly Cellar produced its first wine here in 2001 and since then has won numerous prizes for some of its vintages.

French King Louis XIV once described the wines from Tokaj, in northeast Hungary, as "the wine of kings, the king of wines," and Kovacs proudly refers to his own product as "the queen of wines," a title bestowed on it by the late American violinist Yehudi Menuhin, who savored both.

Electing to Go Alone

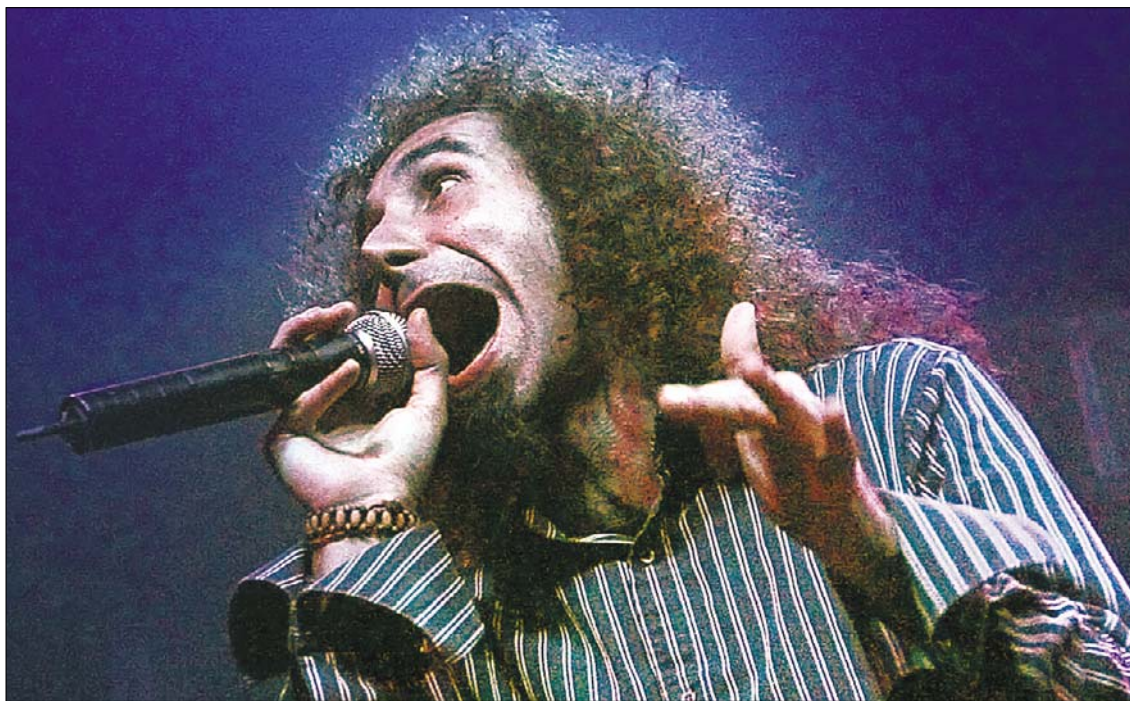

The lead singer of System of a Down flies solo this fall

METAL | System of a Down's Serj Tankian is one of modern metal's most popular singers. He's fond of wry political laments howled over demented guitar thrash tempered with Armenian folk. He is also a gentle protector of insects.

When an errant moth flew into the living room of his home in Calabasas, Calif., while Tankian served rosewater tea, he rushed to cup his hands around it and set it free out the back door. It was a sweet gesture from a vocalist whose most well-known chorus lyric is "I don't think you trust in my self-righteous suicide." But it gave a hint of where Tankian's head is as he prepares to release "Elect the Dead," his debut solo album, due Oct. 23.

Recorded in his rural home studio, with Tankian handling most of the nonpercussion instruments and engineer duties, "Elect the Dead" is more tender and songwriterly than "Mezmerize" and "Hypnotize," the two recent chart-topping System records. It's still a brutally engaging guitar-rock album, to be sure, but it seems to come from a longing for small, more personal changes than System's sonic assault suggests.

"Civilization is already over," Tankian said. "What I felt with FUNNY ROCKER: System of a Down's cult following will be thrilled to learn that its well-loved lead singer, Serj Tankian, is releasing his debut solo album, "Elect the Dead," in October. The record reflects his political activism and bawdy sense of humor.

this record is that micro leads to macro. The other day I was trying to make a left turn on the freeway and a lady slowed to let me in, and that's the same thing as kindness between nations."

Likewise, "Elect the Dead" is full of tiny deviances from System's sound that add up to a distinctly different record. "Feed Us" is rife with jazzy breakdowns and nervous catcalls, and "Lie Lie Lie" is a daffy cabaret number with campy girlish shrieks. "Unthinking Majority" and "Empty Walls" are more traditionally pummeling rockers. But it seems Tankian isn't burdened by the expectations placed on him as a vanguard representative of modern heavy music and as an activist for the Armenian diaspora.

Last year, Tankian lobbied Congress to pass an amendment recognizing the Armenian genocide in Turkey. While the album does have oblique references to "the East where you killed her," "Elect the Dead" isn't a policy paper nor a way to distance himself from System. Because even with its steely lyricism and throttling textures, "Elect the Dead," as in his band's best moments, is also really, really funny.

"Even politics can't be completely serious," Tankian said. "We're silly creatures. If we could record the thoughts of animals, they'd think we're ridiculous." AUGUST BROWN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Bad to the Bonus

DVD special features don't improve the quality of lousy films

DVD | Two major critical disappointments — “Premonition” and “Factory Girl” — arrived on DVD Tuesday. In both cases, the digital extras far outweigh the merits of the films. Critics universally panned “Premonition” (Sony, $29), a psychological thriller starring Sandra Bullock as a wife and mother who doesn't know if her husband is really dead.

The DVD has a few goodies, including an unsettling mini-documentary about real premonitions (such as an interview with a man who dreamed of a fatal plane crash but couldn't get anyone to believe him); the alternate ending, which is far creepier than the one that was used; a truly funny gag reel; and affectionate commentary by Bullock and director Mennan Yapo.

“Factory Girl” (Weinstein, $29), George Hickenlooper's film about Edie Sedgwick (Sienna Miller), the ill-fated '60s “It” girl and her muse, DOOMED PURCHASES: The movies “Premonition” and “Factory Girl,” starring Sienna Miller, pictured, are just as bad on DVD as they were in theaters.

Andy Warhol, was being bandied about last winter as a potential Academy Award candidate. But that talk ended after the film opened to thumbs-down critical response. The DVD, though, features a compelling documentary, “The Real Edie,” that includes interviews with her older brother and people who knew her; Miller's audition tape; a better-than-average “making of” documentary and informative commentary from Hickenlooper.

The DVD features the unrated version of the film, which includes several scenes not in the theatrical version. One such reinstated sequence features Mary-Kate Olsen in her first role without twin sister Ashley.

Garbled Ode to New York

Suzanne Vega tries to honor her city with marginal success

MUSIC | Suzanne Vega's “Beauty and Crime” (Blue Note) uses New York City as a backdrop to weave together a sometimes unrelated — but always wistful — mix of songs in honor of the city and its changes after the terrorist attacks.

The native New Yorker evokes the grief of rescue workers in “Angel's Doorway,” a song about a cop stationed at Ground Zero, and the hope that slowly returned on “Anniversary,” an acoustic ballad that paints a picture of New York a year later when memories of loss filled the empty skyline.

The concept is noble, but it's been done before and naturally subject to comparison.

Wynton Marsalis. Leonard Cohen. Most notably Bruce Springsteen. Everything changed after Sept. 11 when they and countless others recorded albums of poetry and song to honor the city and its resilient wonders.

And to be fair, it's not that the topic has become taboo. But it has to be done well if done at all.

And that's the most unsettling feeling in the album, how it veers wildly away from the streets of New York and the theme she's labored to establish to explore something new.

“New York Is a Woman,” which offers a sultry personification of the Big Apple, seems more like she fell in love with her own poetry. “Frank and Ava” is a ballad about Frank Sinatra and Ava Gardner.

Special Report solves the “My home isn't selling” problem

WASHINGTON METRO — A “Special Report” explodes what its author exposes as “The myth of slow home sales.” In fact, the Report explains, in clear and plain English, how a home owner who wants to sell can not only count on a sale within 120 days but can be guaranteed that the sale will occur.

The Report proves its accuracy by quoting specific local instances in which the technique it describes has sold homes time after time, quickly, efficiently, and at a favorable price.

The author of the report, noted realtor Frank Sanya, has made numerous appearances on both television and radio.

Mr. Sanya states that the Report represents the compendium of his many years of real estate experience and can be of substantial value to homeowners, especially those whose homes have been on the market unsold for a considerable period of time. The author emphasizes that although he does not accept every listing, by following the Report's procedures he accomplishes a sale in every instance in which he is the broker of record.

The secret, says the Report, is a combination of traits and procedures that consistently result in a successful sale. For a free copy of the Report, go to a private but available Web site — www.WantItSoldNow.com.

Calls to police about strange packages are increasingly common

Sirens wailing, bomb technician Paul Friedlander weaves his sport utility vehicle through the congested streets of Washington to a market, where his target sits on a sidewalk surrounded by police tape.

It is a nondescript green suitcase.

Sliding on gloves, Friedlander slices into the bag with a knife and flings the "threats" into the air: towels, sheets and clothes. It's another false alarm, one of thousands of suspicious item reports that have deluged police across the U.S. since the terror attacks of Sept. 11.

"Life is not the same for us," said Friedlander, who says calls about suspicious packages to Washington, D.C., police have at least doubled each year since the terrorist attacks.

Building evacuations, street closings and bomb-squad appearances are almost routine in big cities like Washington and New York, where police departments are stretching their resources to deal with suspicious item reports. But at times, authorities acknowledge, those reactions can seem silly in hindsight.

A post office next to the Smithsonian's National Postal Museum was evacuated in June because of a foul-smelling package. The box contained a dirty diaper.

FALSE ALARM: A D.C. police officer responds to a suspicious-package call in June.

have shut down the area. "You get jaded because it's never anything," Davis-Dow said.

Others say the inconveniences are necessary.

"After what we've been through, it's better to be safe than stupid," said Larry Bravman, who works at a restaurant in Washington, D.C.

Handling so many cases can be an elaborate undertaking. Years ago, an officer would simply pick up a suspicious package to see whether it contained a bomb, said Lou Cannon, president of the union that represents Washington, D.C., police.

Such a reaction seems primitive today, when bomb technicians are typically brought in to analyze suspicious packages.

Suspicious Minds

In May, more than 300 state workers in Tumwater, Wash., were evacuated from the state's Department of Corrections headquarters after a package arrived without a return address. Inside was a doll.

In January, authorities closed parts of Boston after discovering blinking electronic devices. They turned out to be part of a publicity stunt for the Cartoon Network show "Aqua Teen Hunger Force."

Cyndi Davis-Dow, who walks 1 1/2 miles to her job on Capitol Hill in Washington, said she spots street closures a couple of times a month because of suspicious items.

She recently noticed what appeared to be a child's abandoned backpack in a park and shrugged it off, believing that reporting it would

"It really takes away from responding to other needs, particularly in cities that are facing a rise in violent crime," said Joseph Carter, president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Beverages

Improved production is taking the sting out of Mexican tequila

Consider if the only beers in American bars were Schlitz and Old Milwaukee. Or if wine shops stocked only Boone's Farm and Night Train. What place would these beverages have in American culture?

Tequila, this is your lot.

For decades, the bulk of the tequila sold in the U.S. has been bottom-shelf dreck, a hangover-waiting-to-happen that's made from inferior ingredients and marketed as a lowbrow party drug.

"Back in the '80s, that's all we were exposed to," said Kim Haas-arud, a Los Angeles mixologist and co-author of "101 Margaritas." "There were cheap tequilas on the market, and we thought, 'Well, that's tequila.'"

Forget everything you think you know about tequila, then commit this simple phrase to memory: "100 percent agave." Dozens of labels are carrying those magic words these days, the result of a production renaissance in Mexico more than a decade in the making.

As choices have flourished with growing demand, there's never been a better time to rediscover the national spirit of Mexico. Still, that news has been slow to penetrate American preconceptions.

Laurence Kretchmer tells the story of a woman who asked for a Cosmopolitan at New York's Mesa Grill, one of several restaurants he owns with chef Bobby Flay. Like any good tequila connoisseur, he jumped at the opportunity to win a convert.

LARRY CROWE/AP

A basic margarita is the perfect introduction to the wonders of premium tequila.

"She looks at me and goes, 'Oh, no. I had a very bad tequila experience once,'" Kretchmer said. "And I explained to her that she didn't have a bad tequila experience — she had an experience with bad tequila."

And who hasn't?

The lion's share of tequila sold in the U.S. is what's known, somewhat disparagingly, as "mixto," meaning roughly half of it is made from agave, the unique foundation of all tequila, while the other half comes from added sugar.

It's the equivalent of padding your mom's meatloaf with dog chow.

'80s, there were cheap tequilas on the market, and we thought, 'Well, that's tequila.'”

KIM HAASARUD, MIXOLOGIST

That's a shame, because pure agave tequila tastes like nothing else in the world: It's bright and bracing, with racy citrus and vegetal overtones and a hint of sweetness.

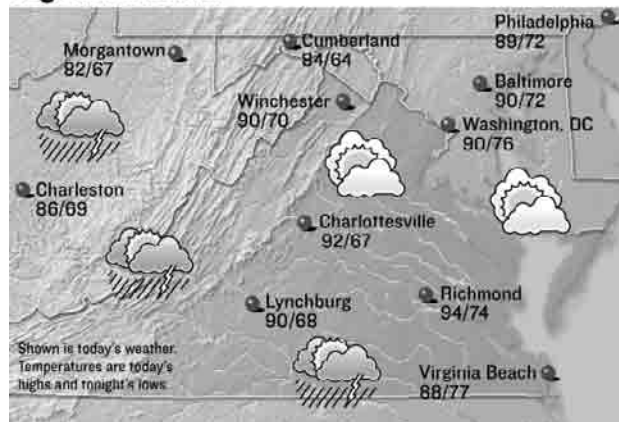

Finding one of these is simpler than you might think: If the words "100 percent agave" appear on the bottle, then it's so, by law.

All the same, mixtos continue to rule the American market, Kretchmer said. "The trend in food and beverage in general is toward better things, but people aren't going to order what they don't know about. It's taking awhile to educate people." JOSH L. DICKEY (AP)

Known for gowns, design team Badgley Mischka now hits the beach

Design team Badgley Mischka wants women to be as glamorous on the beach as they are at a gala. So, its first swimsuit collection elegantly mirrors the elegance of their evening gowns, with jeweled embellishment, expert drapery and delicate embroidery.

Badgley Mischka unveiled its bathing suits during Miami's fashion week, with designs remi-niscant of old Hollywood. Brilliant metallics, navy blues, reds, limes and blacks predominated.

"We were sitting at the pool of the Beverly Hills Hotel this summer imagining the poolside there during the '40s and '50s, all the glamorous stars taking their cocktails by the side of the Beverly Hills Hotel pool," said James Mischka, explaining their inspiration.

MIAMI
REPORT

Old Hollywood was a major inspiration, as in this retro-style red two-piece.

"These are glamorous swimsuits. ... They are taking you to Palm Beach, Capri and to St. Tropez and any yacht over 50 feet," he said.

On the runway, the front of a white one-piece suit was embellished with rusching and embroidered brown flowers, while pink jewels resembling brooches held together a black bikini.

"We used a lot of pretty hardware from our jewelry collection," said Mark Badgley. "We use the same beading and embroidering people that we use in our couture collection to detail some of the suits."

The cover-ups, such as a metallic halter top dress, can double as informal evening wear, Badgley said.

"Some of them have an evening gown look to them," he said. The customer "can just pop one over her swimsuit and go straight to a cocktail party at a resort community or when she's on a yacht or at a resort."

Creating swimsuits was very similar to creating the glamorous dresses the duo is known for, but with suits they spent a lot of time trying to perfect the fit, which is the most important thing, Badgley said.

"We really work on our suits, making sure they are flattering and they don't require a 16-year-old body to wear them," Mischka said. "Our customer is used to coming to us for things that enhance their figure, but they don't draw attention to her flaws."

Fern Mallis, senior vice president of IMG Fashion, which organized the fashion week, said the designers really know their clients.

"It was beautiful. I thought it totally had their style," Mallis said.

Meanwhile, Badgley Mischka is currently designing its first menswear collection, which will debut in one year. LISA ORKIN

Oreo Show a No-Go

Oreos are a dunk-a-licious, creme-filled gift from the cookie gods. Similar reverence is reserved for Hostess cupcakes. So, why would OREO try to copy the Hostess formula by creating the new Cakesters ($3, grocery stores)? For Oreo's 95th birthday, the company released these snack cakes, which have two rounds of "chocolate cake" around a layer of Oreo creme. The "cake" lacks all of the moistness of a Hostess cake, and the creme is grainy. All of the beauty of an Oreo has been stripped away. Somewhere, the cookie gods are weeping. ROXANA HADADI (EXPRESS)

Cornel West

CORNEL WEST, Ph.D., renowned scholar and professor of religion at Princeton University, was online Tuesday and discussed his socially conscious recording project, “Never Forget: A Journey of Revelations.”

What is the message in your project “Never Forget,” and is this a CD that will be available commercially?

Oh, it will be highly available commercially. The fundamental message of the CD with giants like Prince, Gerald Levert, Talib Kweli, KRS-One, Jill Scott and others is to provide a danceable education that highlights the need for an awakening, for political engagement for progressive politics and sheer fun.

Do you agree with Chief Justice Roberts that the best way to stop discrimination based on race is to stop taking race into consideration?

No, I think Judge Roberts is wrong. That in order to confront the ugly legacy of racism you don't act as if we are color-blind overnight. Such action is short-sighted and wrong-headed.

What is your response to Bill Cosby's position on the problems facing the black community and how they should be fixed (e.g., speaking only “correct” English)?

Bill Cosby's gallant attempt to correct the attitudes and actions of young people is significant. I believe that the language of correction must be informed by a fundamental compassion that he must put his love and concern for young people at the forefront of his language of correction. Young people must become more multilingual.

NRA Rhetoric Grows Old

CAN WE PUT to rest once and for all the NRA's tired and deceptive rhetoric, "Guns don't kill people. People kill people" ("Guns Not Root of Violence," July 17)? The truth is, people with guns kill people. Guns make homicidal violence quick, easy, impersonal and, often, consequence-free. You'd have a heck of time trying to kill 10 or 20 people in moments with a knife or a club. And part of the reason there is still so much gun violence in D.C. is that we live adjacent to the unregulated, Wild West-like gun bazaar also known as Virginia.
